Our OAK Accreditation

In conjunction with our partners, consultancy firm Archer Knight, we have launched a new accreditation scheme called OAK (Orion Archer Knight), designed to elevate safety standards for the offshore diving, subsea and marine industries.

The OAK accreditation is a new assessment standard designed to give clients and operators greater assurance of skill and competency levels in the candidates they hire for specialised roles in the marine sector. The assessment will help create a talent pool for clients, who will be able to access individuals who possess a high skill level across a variety of disciplines.

The partnership will target strong suitable candidates with experience of a range of disciplines with recognised competencies that global clients normally require, before carrying out focused assessments and evaluations based around the candidates existing training and experience. Candidates will be interviewed face-to-face by OAK-approved specialists, before receiving accreditation. Unlike other existing training and certification schemes, there is no charge for candidates to secure the accreditation.

Working together with BP

For nearly a decade, Orion has been BP's sole provider of subsea diving support in the UK. As well as managing the contracts of highly-skilled personnel in the sector, we also work closely with BP to promote a culture of competency and safety.

Orion is proud of our special relationship with BP and are committed to delivering the best specialist personnel solutions for their subsea work in the UK.
